MAD DOG BITES CHILD.

Also Attacks Mother Who Went to Her Assistance. Was Later Killed.

A small family dog supposed to have been mad, suddenly attacked Virginia, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rinehart yesterday afternoon, biting her hand severely. Mrs. Rinehart heard the child scream and went to her once, striking the dog on the head. It at once released its hold and sprang at Mrs. Rinehart, fastening its teeth in her arm. Another member of the family came to her assistance and the dog was overcome and later shot.

The dog had been acting strangely for some time, but it being a pet of the little girl and not thinking anything serious was the matter with it, Mrs. Rinehart had refused to have it killed. It had gotten loose somehow yesterday, and the child not realizing the danger, attempted to play with it as usual, when it immediately attacked her. A physician was at once called, who pronounced it suffering with rabies.

Mrs. Rinehart and her daughter, accompanied by Mr. Rinehart, were taken on the early train this morning to Baltimore, Md., where they will undergo treatment at the Pasteur Institute of that city.

The brains of the dog were taken away for examination.

DEFEND SOLDIERS.

Maintain Their Right to Shoot Down Civilians.

Preparations are in progress for a defense before the court of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, in the case of the sentinel, Dowd, who with his officer, Lieutenant Ralph W. Drury, was indicted for killing a young man named Crowley two years ago last September while the latter was supposed to be stealing copper from the Allegheny arsenal.

The supreme court of the United States recently rendered an opinion in this case, but this related only to the right of the state judiciary to deal with the prisoner, who was shot outside the government reservation. Two women testified Crowley was fleeing and was shot in the back, but medical testimony will be produced at the next trial in April in an effort to demonstrate that this was impossible. The supreme court has remanded the prisoners to the custody of the state officials, and both Dowd and Drury have been bailed to appear when wanted.

In this trial the war department will seek to establish the right of a soldier to pursue an escaping prisoner beyond the bounds of its reservations and to shoot at him if necessary to secure the protection of government property. Incidentally it will be contended that the killing of Crowley was not an act of malice. The war department's contention is that while to surrender to the civil authorities soldiers who transgress civil laws, the Crowley case involves a dangerous precedent.

Interesting Program.

It will be pleasing to the Monessen people to learn that the Star Theatre, which is so rapidly becoming the most popular place of amusement in our little city, has at last outdone itself in securing one of the most elaborate programs yet presented. The program will consist of six numbers, "Working Man's Paradise" "Eugene Sandow" "Young America" "Millionaire Hallaway" "Training Jumbers" and "Convict's Escape" and will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. That the management's efforts to keep up the high standard heretofore attained is appreciated, is proven by the steady increase in attendance.

AT THE THEATRE.

At the Monessen opera house on Monday night February 12th "The Hoosier Girl" known as being the most delightful rural comedy promises to score a local hit. It is said to be a great accession to the list of comedy successes, as the bright jollity of the farce creates no end of merriment. It has every reason for succeeding, for it is acted by a capital company including the world-famed Kate Watson in the title role, and it is so distinctly novel in scheme and development that it furnishes what most people like best, a diversion from accepted standard. The plot is good and will keep you guessing. The incidents are immensely amusing, which makes it quite the breeziest offering for a long time.

A LONG SMOKE

(Original.)

We were celebrating Jim Blackstone's wooden wedding and had loaded his wife down with tubs, washboards, bread boards, rolling pins and the like. After eating a good supper I said to the husband:

"Come, Jim, it's time for you to tell the story about your wedding night."

"You've heard that story annually for ten years."

"Nine. This'll be the tenth."

"Well, if it's a part of the festivities, here goes. It's not much of a story, with only a horse for a hero. When Doll and I agreed to get married we were both living in the northeast corner of New Mexico. Her father gave us a quarter section of land on the Canadian river not far below its source, and I built a house on it. I was delayed in getting some furniture I'd bought at Santa Fe, and on the wedding day, after the ceremony, which occurred about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, I started out to look for it. It was agreed that if I didn't get back by sunset the family were to go to the new house and wait for me there.

I rode my sorrel horse, Pete, and made for the road leading past the military post, for that's the route by which I expected the furniture. I met the wagon lumbering along and, looking at my watch, calculated that it wouldn't reach the ranch before 9 or 10 o'clock at night. It was then about an hour before sunset, and I hesitated whether to go back to my father-in-law's or to the ranch. I decided for the ranch. When I reached it darkness had come down, but a full moon was rising. I was riding through some timber, from which I emerged in sight of the house, when Pete stopped suddenly. His ears were standing straight forward, and he trembled all over. I couldn't see what troubled him. Everything looked peaceful enough at the house. A man I had hired and in whose care I had left the place was sitting in his chair on the porch, with his heels up on one of the pillars—smoking. I supposed I could just see him by the light of the rising moon. Then it occurred to me that since the place was not lighted the party had not arrived and I would go and meet them. I made one more effort to get Pete to move forward, but failed.

I rode all the way without meeting the party and when I reached Doll's home found them all anxious for my safety, for they had heard that Apaches had been seen during the afternoon in the neighborhood. Doll would have doubtless thrown herself on my neck and wept for joy at seeing me, only she hadn't been married long enough to do such things in company.

It occurred to me that Pete had smelled Indians. But they couldn't have been at the ranch house, for the hired man was sitting out unmindful of them. However, Mr. Gunther, my wife's father; Tom Williams, a man working on his place, and I all took Winchesters and started on foot for the ranch. When we neared it we skulked through the timber and came out on the edge of the clearing, near where Pete had stopped. The moon was partly obscured by clouds, but there was enough light for us to see that the hired man was still sitting in the position in which I had left him, which must have been an hour before. I thought he was taking a pretty long smoke or something was wrong. While we were wondering two dark figures came out of the house—we at once recognized them for Indians—and, scraping up some loose pieces of wood, put them under the porch and set it afire.

"I didn't propose to have my house destroyed, especially on my wedding night, and whispered the order to crawl quickly forward. The burning sticks lighted up several Indians, who were joined by half a dozen others from the inside of the house. I told each of my companions which savage to pick off, and I, taking a third myself, we all fired together. Two of the Indians dropped and the others ran. More came dashing out of the house, but our rifles being repeaters, we pumped lead briskly, and the Indians, not knowing how many of us there were, ran away. I was pleased to see that they took their dead and wounded with them, for I didn't want them around on my wedding night. As soon as they were gone we ran forward, kicked the kindling from under the porch, and a bucketful of water put out the fire.

"Having examined the inside to see if the Indians had put any fire there, we approached the hired man, who through all the melee sat with his heels on the pillar, apparently unmindful of what was going on. The first thing I noticed about him was a bald spot on the top of his head—for his hat was not on it—and I knew at once what it meant. He had been scalped. The man was stone dead. He had been placed as a decoy.

"About this time the furniture wagon drove up, and the man in charge, not knowing what had taken place, began to unload it. When he heard of my narrow escape, and consequently his, he wilted.

"Doll and I spent our wedding night at her father's house. She declined to live at the ranch, which I sold to a man who lost his scalp a year later. We stayed awhile at the home of Doll's parents, and as Doll wouldn't go on to the ranch I brought her here."

"What became of Pete?"

"Well, seeing that Pete had saved the groom's life, the wagon driver's life and the lives of the others who when I appeared were preparing to go to the ranch in search of me, Doll fed him so high that he'd have died if she had stayed there. When we left, we sold him to a man who forced him against his will among a lot of Apaches, and his owner lost his scalp."

Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. CORTON.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor even ride in easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.
